

Summary aicb

AICB is a decentralised bank based on the blockchain, we made use of the blockchain to offer the banking services offered by investment banks.

Aicb is divided in to 5 sections,

The first section is an exchange, inside the exchange our customers can trade in a decentralised manal, we have the decentralized liquidity pool, automated market maker etc. The exchange also has the synthetic version of fiat currencies, we have tokenized several fiat currencies, this allows traders and any one to be exposed to the underlying price of these fiat currencies, they can trade these currencies and use the currencies to make cross border transactions.

The second section is the wallet section, inside this section we provide our customers a way to store and secure their assets.

The third section is the utility, we provided this section in other to allow the holders of some accredited crypto currencies to be able to spend the currencies directly without passing through the hassle of converting the crypto back to the fiat currencies, thus they will be able to use their crypto currencies directly to book flights, rides and hotel accommodations, which will allow them to travel around the world without being bothered about converting thirty crypto assets.

The fourth section is the decentralised asset management, this is a unique section whereby different machine learning based asset managers or portfolio optimisation algorithms to manage customers portfolio in a decentralised manner, this asset management is a non custodian asset management protocol that allow investors to invest with the best performing portfolio managers, the fees for managing assets are being set by the managers themselves, this allows the investors to choose between the best performing and low fee asset managers in a non-custodial manal hereby giving the control of investors asset to them because the funds are being locked up in the aicb vault and the asset managers only trade the assets without having ability to withdraw the assets without the consent of the AICB asset management protocol.

The fifth section of the aicb bank is the global money transfer section, we made use of the synthetic version of several fiat currencies to transfer funds from one person to the other, this allows fast transaction and low transaction fees.
